

Community update | November 2014

The Australian and NSW governments are building WestConnex, a 33 kilometre motorway, linking the M4 and M5 motorways for the first time. WestConnex will slash travel times for motorists and support thousands of new jobs. When completed it will connect Sydney's west, south-west, CBD, airport and port precincts and include a tunnel between St Peters and Beverly Hills, with an interchange at St Peters.

The St Peters Interchange will be built mainly on the site of the Alexandria Landfill and open in 2019. Connections to the surrounding road network will be delivered primarily using long standing road reservations.

The interchange layout will be identified after an international tender process is complete. The design will be presented for community comment as part of an Environmental Impact Statement exhibition in late 2015.

Investigatory drilling is currently underway as a normal part of motorway planning and does not reflect an exact alignment. We will use this to help determine the design of the interchange and surrounding connections.
